THAT two Circleville brothers occupy an important spot in the history of gun making in America.

They are Charles and Christian Siebert, who developed a muzzle-loading rifle which played an important part in the equipment of pioneers in the far West. One of the rifles is still preserved in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The two brothers were sons of Henry Siebert, who was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, and came to Ohio and located in Columbus about 1830. He established the first bakery in the capital city... then a mere village.

Charles Siebert, who stands out as the more impressive of the pair, was born in Columbus in 1839. He learned gunsmithing and became an expert worker both in wood and metal. Associated with his brother, Christian, he opened gunsmithing establishments both in Circleville and Columbus.

These two later became known as the greatest gun makers of their time. Their reputation was attested to by old-time hunters and sportsmen as well as by government authorities.

The Siebert muzzle-loading rifle which they developed was celebrated as the best type of this class of fire arms and it was as an interesting proof of its superiority that one of the rifles was selected for preservation in the Smithsonian Institution.

As an important part of the equipment of the early Western settlers, the Siebert rifle was used extensively in the killing of buffalo on the open plains.

Prior to the Civil War, Charles Siebert moved to St. Louis to work in the government arsenal. It was here that he developed many useful contrivances for the government. After the war started he returned to Ohio and joined the 133rd Volunteer Infantry with which he served throughout the conflict. Following the war he returned to Circleville where he lived for a number of years continuing in the gun making trade.

CHARLES Siebert's son, Charles, Jr., who died two years ago developed the largest general insurance agency in central Ohio at Columbus. He started it in 1897 and steadily enlarged its resources so as to meet all the multitude of demands placed upon a large institution of its kind. His brother, Louis, is now living in Columbus.

Born in Circleville in 1875, Charles Siebert, Jr. was a son of Charles and Harriet Valentine Siebert. He attended the public schools in Circleville until 1888 when his family moved to Columbus.

Among others of special distinction in the family was John Siebert, who was one of the founders and later president of the Ohio National Bank in Columbus. The late Professor Wilbur H. Siebert of Ohio State university, a very able scholar and outstanding historian, was also a member of the family.

Charles B. Galbreath's "History of Ohio," published in 1925, said of the Siebert family: "No name in Columbus is more significant of business enterprise and sound citizenship than Siebert. They have lived there more than 90 years, and in pioneer times as well as in the present they have contributed most substantially to the improvement of the city, in industry, in finance and in commercial enterprise. The Sieberts have been sturdy, industrious, progressive citizens, leaders in their respective vocations or professions and high-minded men always."

Siebert Street in Columbus was named for the family.

STATE BOARD BEFORE COURT

Utilities Commission Contest of Board Control Power Is Started.

COLUMBUS, July 6—Into the laps of seven black-robed justices of the state supreme court today dropped the first test of powers granted the state board of control.

Represented by Don C. TWO UTILITIES GET ATTENTION FROM COUNCIL

Hearing on Water Company Application is Scheduled Friday

$12,913 DEBT SOUGHT

Phipps Says He's Ready to Get Busy

Two utilities, water and gas, are occupying the attention of city councilmen as they are drawing near some definite action in both.

The water question becomes imperative since the Ohio Water Service Co. is pressing its claim for $12,913.59 owed by the city for fire hydrants.

The gas question is also thrown into the center of the stage since Chillicothe newspapers on Friday quoted W. H. Phipps, president of the Universal Pipeline Co., as saying that his company will start construction next week on a pipe line from the Jackson and Vinton co field making cheap gas available from that location within 90 days.

To Tap Ohio Field

Phipps told Mayor Walter Barrett of the sister city that his company was going into the Jackson-Vinton field before building from Kentucky and asked the mayor if he had any objection to Ohio gas. Barrett replied that so long as it had the necessary heating strength and was available in sufficient quantity he would be satisfied.

The deadline for the Universal Pipeline to act is nearing. It was almost a year ago that a contract was entered into by this city, Chillicothe, and several other southern Ohio cities. Phipps' company was given one year to get into action.

Phipps has promised to provide gas for 40 cents.

Hearing Friday

The question of payment of the water bill becomes urgent since the city must put up a defense next Friday in the state utilities commission to the plea of the water company to stop fire protection service unless the city pays its bill. Two weeks ago the PUC gave the utility permission to stop its fire hydrant service in Washington C. H. on Sept. 1 unless satisfactory arrangement can be made for payment of $30,763.33 that city owes.

With this big bill hanging over their heads, councilmen are discussing purchase of the plant and its distribution system through a government loan. Council has gone so far along this line that Solicitor Carl Leist has been instructed to learn whether council can act on its own initiative in the question, or whether the application should be placed before the citizens for a vote.

Meet Next Week

Council last Wednesday adjourned its meeting only one week, until July 10, and will probably at that time know more about the plans of the pipeline company and also what kind of a defense it intends to use against the water company's action.

TRUSTEES HIT BY NEW LAW

Statute Bars City Residents From Serving as Township Trustees.

A new law passed by the last legislature and signed by Governor Martin Davey is a blow to Circleville residents who have been serving as Circleville-twp trustees.

Under the ruling no township trustee may be a resident of a corporation. He must live within the township he serves but outside of the corporate limits.

Since trustees are up for election this fall the ruling comes at an important time.

Neither of the three men now serving the township, John Greeno, Adam Goldhart or Will Lake, would be eligible for reelection under the ruling since all live in Circleville.

M. J. Valentine of Washington-twp, president of the County Association of Trustees, informed The Herald today that he has a copy of the last bulletin of the state trustees association which discloses the new law.

MOTOR FIRM ASKS RETURN OF AUTOS

The Olds Motor Works has started action in Fairfield-co courts to recover automobiles sold by Kelly Hannan, Lancaster and Circleville automobile dealer, who is no longer in this community.

The motor company filed its action to recover the Oldsmobile sedan owned by A. A. Greiner, Lancaster, a garage employee.

Several local persons who bought cars from Hannan have been called to Lancaster to explain payments on their cars. Several had made payments to Hannan as agent for the Colonial Finance Co., Lima, but the finance company claims it has not received the money. It, however, is honoring receipts given by Hannan.

No definite trace has yet been obtained as to the whereabouts of the dealer.

GIRL'S KILLER IS BACK HOME

Merton Goodrich Tells Reporters He Will Plead Guilty To Any Charge.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6—While police maintained a heavy guard to prevent any possible lynching attempt, Merton Ward Goodrich, mad musician from Ohio and confessed slayer of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher, today was brought back here from New York to face Michigan justice.

His wife, Florence, who was arrested in New York with him and returned on the same train in police custody, remarked:

"It's the end of everything."

Then, turning to the crowd of curious that had assembled at the station, she cried out in defiance:

"Let them stare, let them stare. They can't hurt me!"

Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert and Chief of Detectives Fred W. Frahm personally led the detail of 2 heavily armed officers who met the degenerate killer and his wife. A crowd of more than 200 persons was in the station but it was not in an ugly mood and comprised only the curious.

The thin-faced killer and his crippled wife were rushed through the baggage room of the station and the crowd caught only a fleeting glimpse of the couple that had led authorities on a 10-months hunt through two countries.

Goodrich, as he stepped from the train, offered:

"I'll plead guilty to any charge they make against me, if they only let my wife go. She is innocent. Her only fault was being loyal to me."

Sherrill Report Annoys Dargusch, of Commission

COLUMBUS, July 6—Carlton S. Dargusch, vice-chairman of the State Taxation commission, today fired back at Col. C. O. Sherrill, chairman of the state government survey, which in a report to the Governor, recommended reorganization in the commission to net an annual savings of $931,229.

Stinging under the lash of charges that the commission was top-heavy, and not run on an economical basis, Mr. Dargusch said, "If they think they can eliminate politics from state government, I'm all for them."

He said he had been trying to eliminate as many employees as possible from the payrolls of the tax commission, asserting that 150 had been dropped from the salary lists within the past two months. He hinted that politics was not entirely absent from the Sherrill group, in that his department was the first to be hit by the government survey.

The government survey has spent six months investigating the

The duties of each state director will include the important function of obtaining the co-operation of all industrial, commercial, agricultural and educational forces in carrying out the program of the national youth administration.

The scope of the program is designed to affect all persons who are no longer in regular attendance in schools, and who are unemployed and are between the ages of 16 and 25.

Indubitably some of the youths who have served as long as they could in the CCC will be benefited by this organization as well as many others. It is reported that at least 500,000 of young unemployed boys and girls will obtain

Statute Bars City Residents From Serving as Township Trustees.

A new law passed by the last legislature and signed by Governor Martin Davey is a blow to Circleville residents who have been serving as Circleville-twp trustees.

Under the ruling no township trustee may be a resident of a corporation. He must live within the township he serves but outside of the corporate limits.

Since trustees are up for election this fall the ruling comes at an important time.

Neither of the three men now serving the township, John Greeno, Adam Goldhart or Will Lake, would be eligible for reelection under the ruling since all live in Circleville.

M. J. Valentine of Washington-twp, president of the County Association of Trustees, informed The Herald today that he has a copy of the last bulletin of the state trustees' association which discloses the new law.

MOTOR FIRM ASKS RETURN OF AUTOS

The Olds Motor Works has started action in Fairfield-co courts to recover automobiles sold by Kelly Hannan, Lancaster and Circleville automobile dealer, who is no longer in this community.

The motor company filed its action to recover the Oldsmobile sedan owned by A. A. Greiner, Lancaster, a garage employee.

Several local persons who bought cars from Hannan have been called to Lancaster to explain payments on their cars. Several had made payments to Hannan as agent for the Colonial Finance Co., Lima, but the finance company claims it has not received the money. It, however, is honoring receipts given by Hannan.

No definite trace has yet been obtained as to the whereabouts of the dealer.

Rev. Frease Begins State Church Work

Rev. Joseph W. Frease, native of Stoutsville and former pastor of Strasburg and Beach City Lutheran churches, has started his new duties in Columbus as director of education and young people's work for the Lutheran church of Ohio.

His first important work will be in connection with the Lutheran summer school at Lakeside July 22. He will also take part in the Luther league convention July 26-28.

GIRL'S KILLER IS BACK HOME

Merton Goodrich Tells Reporters He Will Plead Guilty To Any Charge.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6—While police maintained a heavy guard to prevent any possible lynching attempt, Merton Ward Goodrich, mad musician from Ohio and confessed slayer of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher, today was brought back here from New York to face Michigan justice.

His wife, Florence, who was arrested in New York with him and returned on the same train in police custody, remarked:

"It's the end of everything." Then, turning to the crowd of curious that had assembled at the station, she cried out in defiance: "Let them stare, let them stare. They can't hurt me!"

Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert and Chief of Detectives Fred W. Frahm personally led the detail of 2 heavily armed officers who met the degenerate killer and his wife. A crowd of more than 200 persons was in the station but it was not in an ugly mood and comprised only the curious.

The thin-faced killer and his crippled wife were rushed through the baggage room of the station and the crowd caught only a fleeting glimpse of the couple that had led authorities on a 10-months hunt through two countries.

Goodrich, as he stepped from the train, offered:

"I'll plead guilty to any charge they make against me, if they only let my wife go. She is innocent. Her only fault was being loyal to me."

Sherrill Report Annoys Dargusch, of Commission

COLUMBUS, July 6—Carlton S. Dargusch, vice-chairman of the State Taxation commission, today fired back at Col. C. O. Sherrill, chairman of the state government survey, which in a report to the Governor, recommended reorganization in the commission to net an annual savings of $931,229.

Stinging under the lash of charges that the commission was top-heavy, and not run on an economical basis, Mr. Dargusch said, "If they think they can eliminate politics from state government, I'm all for them."

He said he had been trying to eliminate as many employees as possible from the payrolls of the tax commission, asserting that 150 had been dropped from the salary lists within the past two months. He hinted that politics was not entirely absent from the Sherrill group, in that his department was the first to be hit by the government survey.

The Government survey has spent six months investigating the

TWO UTILITIES GET ATTENTION FROM COUNCIL

Hearing on Water Company Application is Scheduled Friday

$12,913 DEBT SOUGHT

Phipps Says He's Ready to Get Busy

Two utilities, water and gas, are occupying the attention of city councilmen as they are drawing near some definite action in both.

The water question becomes imperative since the Ohio Water Service Co. is pressing its claim for $12,913.59 owed by the city for fire hydrants.

The gas question is also thrown into the center of the stage since Chillicothe newspapers on Friday quoted W. H. Phipps, president of the Universal Pipeline Co., as saying that his company will start construction next week on a pipe line from the Jackson and Vinton-co field making cheap gas available from that location within 90 days.

To Tap Ohio Field

Phipps told Mayor Walter Barrett of the sister city that his company was going into the Jackson-Vinton field before building from Kentucky and asked the mayor if he had any objection to Ohio gas. Barrett replied that so long as it had the necessary heating strength and was available in sufficient quantity he would be satisfied.

The deadline for the Universal Pipeline to act is nearing. It was almost a year ago that a contract was entered into by this city, Chillicothe, and several other southern Ohio cities. Phipps' company was given one year to get into action.

Phipps has promised to provide gas for 40 cents.

Hearing Friday

The question of payment of the water bill becomes urgent since the city must put up a defense next Friday in the state utilities commission to the plea of the water company to stop fire protection service unless the city pays its bill. Two weeks ago the PUC gave the utility permission to stop its fire hydrant service in Washington C. H. on Sept. 1 unless satisfactory arrangement can be made for payment of $30,763.33 that city owes.

With this big bill hanging over their heads, councilmen are discussing purchase of the plant and its distribution system through a government loan. Council has gone so far along this line that Solicitor Carl Leist has been instructed to learn whether council can act on its own initiative in the question, or whether the application should be placed before the citizens for a vote.

Meet Next Week

Council last Wednesday adjourned its meeting only one week, until July 10, and will probably at that time know more about the plans of the pipeline company and also what kind of a defense it intends to use against the water company's action.

SHERMAN A. GOOD, OF KINGSTON, DIES

Sherman A. Good, 68, of Kingston, died Saturday at 5:10 a. m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Carl Knapp in Chillicothe. A liver ailment caused death.

The deceased was a former employee in the Snyder and Immel Milling Co., Kingston.

He is survived by his widow, Viola; one son, Douglas, and one daughter, Mrs. Knapp, one stepson, Harry Langdon, one brother, Thomas Good, and one sister, Mrs. George Adams, all of Chillicothe.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. in Brown's chapel near Frankfort with Rev. Sims of the Walnut-st. M. E. church, Chillicothe, officiating. The body will be at the Knapp home until time of service.

Burial will be in the Brown's chapel cemetery.

THE CHURCH IN THE SUMMER TIME

A layman has given the following reasons for his attendance at church in the summertime:

1. God blessed the Lord's Day and hallowed it, and did not except hot, cold or stormy days.
2. I expect the clergyman to be there. I should be surprised if he were to stay at home on account of the weather.
3. If his hands fail through weakness, I shall have great reason to blame myself, unless I sustain him by my prayers and presence.
4. Whatever station I hold in the church, my example must influence others. If I stay away, why not others?
5. Such weather will show me on what foundation my faith is built; it will prove how much I love Christ. True love rarely fails to meet an appointment.
6. My faith should not depend on the rise and fall of the thermometer. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

REVENGE

The story is told of an old lady who rented a furnished villa for the summer, which included also the family dog. In the living room was a very comfortable arm chair which the old lady liked. However she nearly always found the chair occupied by the large dog. Since she was afraid of the dog and didn't want to go near it, she conceived the idea of going to the window and calling "Cats". Then the dog would rush to the window and bark and the old lady would slip into the chair quietly.

One day the dog entered the room and found the old lady in his chair. He strolled over to the win-

Moses—Leader and Law-Giver

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Exodus 24:1-18.

Moses' life divides itself into three periods of 40 years each, the first spent in Egypt. At his birth his parents hid him in a basket along a river where the daughter of Pharaoh found him and reared him in the court as her son.

The next 40 years were spent as a shepherd in the same wilderness through which he was later to guide the Israelites. Here God, speaking to him from a burning bush, called Moses to deliver his people from Egyptian bondage.

Moses' repeated demands for the release of God's people finally were acceded to by Pharaoh and he led them forth. At the Red Sea God opened the waters for them, at the same time destroying their oppressors.

The new nation was to have a constitution which God gave to Moses on Mt.
Sinai. We know it as the Ten Commandments, the basis of our modern systems of law and our moral codes.

The other day we saw this sentence on an outdoor bulletin board—"Religion begins in inner and constant thought." We lay too little stress on the inner life. A great educator recently blamed our schools and parents for crowding their children. We want them to do things. We give them too many activities. The things we teach them fall on hard soil and do not germinate. Ideas are like seeds, they must be underground, in the dark, to germinate. So this educator pleads for more time for the inner life to develop. Only so can there be growth of mind and heart and soul. Jesus took His disciples apart from the crowds. Give more time to inner and constant thought, thought of God and all that implies. The Quaker has one solution. It may be the extreme. Have we gone to another in avoiding quiet? The church will offer you a retreat. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

REVENGE

The story is told of an old lady who rented a furnished villa for the summer, which included also the family dog. In the living room was a very comfortable arm chair which the old lady liked. However she nearly always found the chair occupied by the large dog. Since she was afraid of the dog and didn't want to go near it, she conceived the idea of going to the window and calling "Cats". Then the dog would rush to the window and bark and the old lady would slip into the chair quietly.

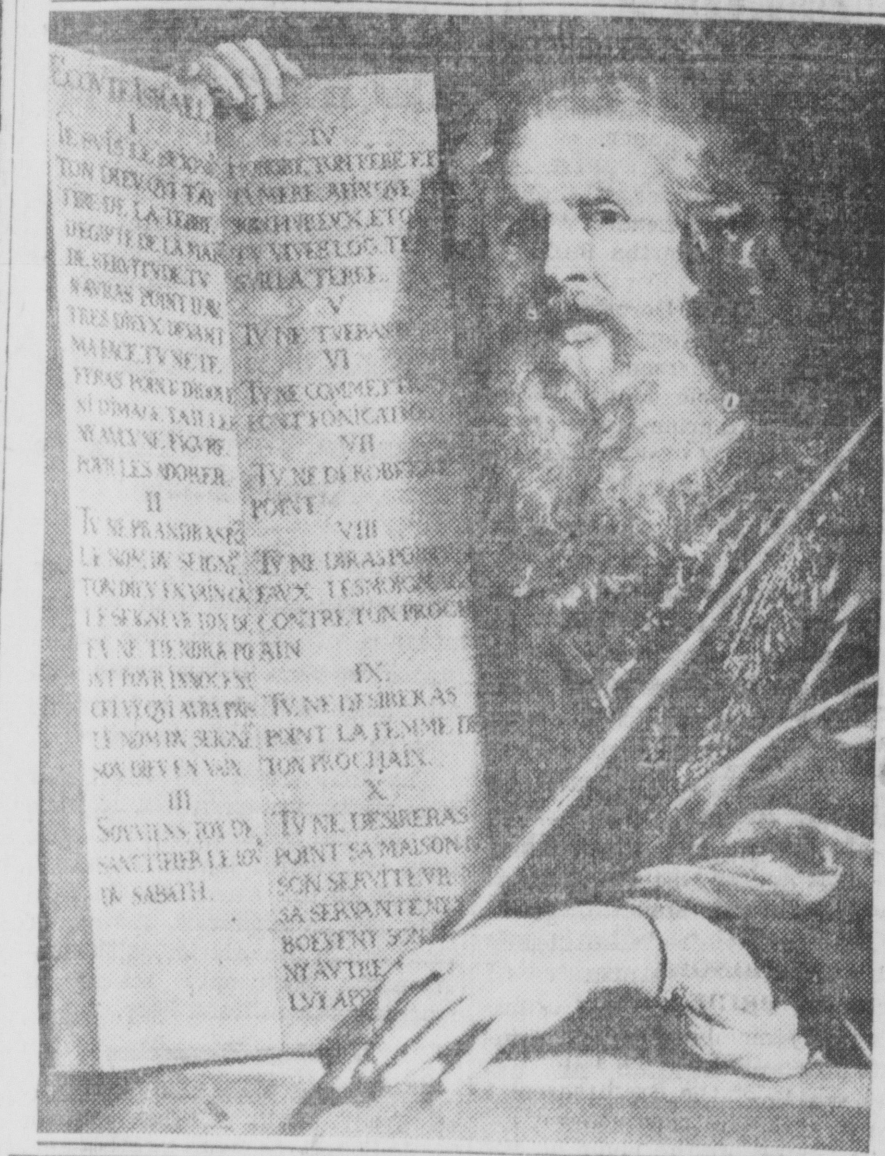

One day the dog entered the room and found the old lady in his chair. He stroled over to the window and looking out became very much excited and started to bark.

Moses—Leader and Law-Giver

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Exodus 24:1-18.

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell
And Alfred J. Buescher

Moses' life divides itself into three periods of 40 years each, the first spent in Egypt. At his birth his parents hid him in a basket along a river where the daughter of Pharaoh found him and reared him in the court as her son.

The next 40 years were spent as a shepherd in the same wilderness through which he was later to guide the Israelites. Here God, speaking to him from a burning bush, called Moses to deliver his people from Egyptian bondage.

Moses' repeated demands for the release of God's people finally were acceded to by Pharaoh and he led them forth. At the Red Sea God opened the waters for them, at the same time destroying their oppressors.

The new nation was to have a constitution which God gave to Moses on Mt. Sinai. We know it as the Ten Commandments, the basis of our modern systems of law and our moral codes. (GOLDEN TEXT—Psalm 33:12) various departments in the state, and this was the first section of the completed report. It is known that the section of the report dealing with the state liquor control department will be even more severe in recommending charges and amounts that could be saved Ohio taxpayers in all, Col. Sherill says the recommendations of his survey, if followed out, will net the state a saving of over $5,000,000.

The chief shake-ups urged for the tax commission were the establishment of a tax administrator, coordination of activities to cut off a large salary list, placing of employees under civil service, and a proposal to amend the gasoline tax law to add $800,000 to the state's income, by lowering the evaporation deduction from three to one per cent.

GASOLINE AGENTS TO COMBAT SLASH

COLUMBUS, July 6.—Recovering from the surprise occasioned by the unanticipated recommendation of the Sherrill government survey group that the 3 per cent evaporation exemption be reduced to one per cent, Ohio gasoline dealers, large and small, today laid plans to oppose the cut.

Col. C. O. Sherrill's reduction proposal caught them unawares but they lost no time in forming ranks to forestall its adoption. To effectuate the percentage cut Ohio's gas tax law by the legislature, which was gratifying to the would require amendment of strong petroleum interests lobby.

SINGING IN CHURCH

BISHOP Manning of New York, in addressing a convention of the American Guild of Organists in the Cathedral of St. John and Divine, had something to say about congregational singing that should interest many people. Such an act of worship, he said, is much neglected, as his hearers undoubtedly agreed, and may well be revived.

In all churches, especially in those whose congregations are the more prosperous, choir and organ do most of the work. In the evangelical congregations there is more personal participation in service music—some congregations make a great point of it, but by no means all. People stand, and if they were left to themselves there would be no deafening response, vocally. A singing congregation is a rarity for some reason, unless there is unusual fervor in worship. In some churches it seems as though a hearty individual singer would attract notice to himself. This is especially true in those in which much is made of their professional choirs. Not that some amateur vocalists can be praised especially as artists, but a high quality is not expected in the average congregation. Singing as worship is good for every participant, and "singing churches" are inspiring to attend. A good hymn can be made into an occasion.

The hum-hummer is numerous, but everybody does not even hum. Why not? The males are far too inclined to let the women and children go first. That is laudable in shipwrecks, but not called for in church.

BRIDES AND TIMES

SEVERAL explanations have been given for the marriage slump of the last three years. Upholders and viewers-with-alarm find in it proof of civilization's breakdown and of moral decay. Hitler, of course, says the situation was fostered by the iniquities of the Versailles treaty.

There is one rational and logical explanation. It is that the decline in marriages is purely a depression phenomenon. Hasty and poorly financed marriages still take place but they are less frequent than when jobs hunt the man.

This situation proves again that youth rushes in where old age fears to tread. The decline in nuptials is due to the patience and prudence of maturity rather than to youthful sobriety. Youth is still an impetuous lover, according to the marriage records.

Marriages among persons under 20 are increasing in spite of the depression and general unemployment. And it is probably a good thing because setting up housekeeping now costs less than a honeymoon did six years ago.

Strange how this institution of marriage is always shaking on its foundations but never falls. It is like the end of the world—scheduled for tomorrow but tomorrow never comes.

HOW MANY TRICKS CAN NORTH WIN?

HERE IS a very interesting hand, unusually well played by North. The opening lead was the K of clubs, followed by the 4 of diamonds, which dummy's K won. The question was whether 4-odd could be made.

Bidding went: South, 1-Diamond; West, 1-No Trump; North, 2-Hearts; East, 3-Clubs; South, 3-Hearts; West, 4-Clubs; North, 4-Hearts, which West doubled.

Having lost a club trick and won a diamond trick the declarer took three rounds of trumps, winning the last one in dummy. He saw that leading the K of diamonds would be fatal, as his J-9 would block him from further entry to the exposed hand.

At the sixth trick a low diamond was led from dummy. West's Q won. North took his J of diamonds, then overtook his last diamond with

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BY BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 47

TOWARD late afternoon of the day he and Lia went trout fishing, Val cleaned their catch and placed them on fern beds in their creels. That accomplished, the two trudged back to the cabin for their evening swim. Presently Lia in bathing suit, a red bandana tied about her blue-black hair, came out onto the porch. The phonograph was playing and in a gay mood she fitted slim arms above her head, and danced on tiptoe and with an exaggerated motion of her slender lips.

"I am Minnie the Mover," she called to Val just sliding into his suit, "and no beautiful bronzed Adonis can beat me to the center of the lake."

"Oh, he can't, can he?" he cried. "Well, here he comes to give you a spunk for good measure."

With a gurgle of excited laughter the girl sprang down the steps and darted toward the float to fling herself in a slim curve out into the deep waters. Close on her flying heels Val plunged in and started a pursuit as she dived, dived, and dived him under water. She was a clever dodger and it was minutes before he finally caught her small squirming body in a firm clasp, laughing helplessly, panting from their exertions, they clung together, keeping themselves afloat. Her face wet close to his, her body pressed so tightly against his side that he could feel the pound of her heart. Her black eyes glistened with little bright sparks of laughter that was still defiant. And then suddenly, impulsively, he leaned to crush his mouth against her red, half-opened lips.

He saw her eyes widen, a strangely exultant light leaped in their depths. He released her abruptly and they flung apart. Then, with one accord, they set out on their swim, the rhythm of his finely-muscled body adjusted to hers as they cleaved the water in long easy strokes.

Back at the cabin once more, sleek haired and freshly clothed, they went about the task of preparing dinner. They had little to say to each other; but tonight, for the first time in days, Val found himself free of the nagging urge for a drink and a strange excitement mixed with elation coursed through his veins. While Lia laid the table the phonograph played last year's song hits and he found himself singing with them as he gave an expert hand to frying the brook trout that had been rolled first in flour, then in corn meal; when they were a crisp, golden-brown he broiled them sizzling hot with corn bread, buttered string beans, fruit and black coffee. Food fit for a rajah, an emperor, a conqueror.

With darkness the mountain chill crept down. Stretched on the wide couch before the fire, drowsy from dinner and his day in the sun and wind, Val lounged aimlessly. Nearby, Lia sat relaxed in an arm chair and as she stared at the burning logs, her slow southern voice touched lightly on various events in her short life. These last few evenings—probably as an outlet after her days of enforced silence—she had spoken of summer in Virginia Beach and a stay in Nassau, when many men had pursued and Aunt Julia Lee had permitted acquaintance with none. It seemed strange to think of Lia in these places. Somehow, he had pictured her always in the moldy old house and garden on the Ashley, though now that he thought of it, he recalled that she had once told him that she and her Aunt Julia Lee had sometimes traveled a little.

On these past evenings, however, he had been too engrossed in his own thoughts to pay much attention to her ramblings. Indeed the only part of her idle recollections that had eluded him was the fact that there was an incident during her year at a small southern seminary.

During the Easter vacation before graduation, one of the students had days' engagement at the Cliftona Theatre Sunday.

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Flame Within," she portrays a famous woman psychiatrist who devotes a year of her life to the redemption of a ne'er-do-well, giving so much of herself to the man that she inevitably falls in love with him.

Others of importance in the cast include Henry Stephenson, favorite character actor, Margaret Seddon, George Hassell, Iley Malony and Claudette Kaye. The story is an original by Goulding.

Washington Surgeon's Leg Amputated, He Gives Help to Others

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN LONDON there is a cheerful little man who has had both his legs amputated. He is a surgeon. He records his own personal experience for the benefit of others.

This patient has, however, not descended into Avernus in vain. He has some hints to help out the rest of humanity who may be suffering as he did.

"Within eight weeks or so the patient discovers a number of duties which he can perform, and his general health will proceed uphill continuously if he takes, say, four miles vigorous exercise daily in an arm-propelled chair—an exercise very nearly as satisfying as is rowing. He will even take a sporting interest of a modest kind in learning to walk on artificial legs."

"If any member of the profession with bordering cases on his hands cares to talk the problem over, and to learn sundry little devices for making the legless man's life comfortable and happy, I shall be only too glad to see him."

If any patient is interested in these little devices, this column will be glad to act as an intermediary and send to that patient's physician the account of them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendenning can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indication and Contraindication," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

in strength and spirit through pain, day and night, punctuated with bursts of acute agony which are a source of misery and anxiety to relatives and friends; immediately after amputation the patient rejoices in the sense of the daily access of increasing strength and good spirits."

We must all have experienced that feeling some time, of wanting to have some part of us that is undergoing pain actually cut off. A surgeon of my acquaintance told me not long ago of a patient who had walked into his consultation room that day holding out two thumbs and requesting that they be cut off.

"Incidentally, it may be of interest to say that after 15 months of year. They thought they had found just the thing as State Works-Relief Administrator, but Harry Hopkins would have none of him and Jim and Guy had to begin their search all over again.

POEMS THAT LIVE

LONGING
Come to me in my dreams, and then
By day I shall be well again!
For then the night will more than pay
The hopeless longing of the day.

Come, as thou canst a thousand times,
A messenger from radiant climes,
And smile on thy new world, and be
As kind to others as to me!

Or, as thou never canst in sooth,
Come now, and let me dream it true;
And part my hair, and kiss my brow,
And say: My love! why sufferest thou?

Come to me in my dreams, and then
By day I shall be well again!
For then the night will more than pay
The hopeless longing of the day.

SINGING IN CHURCH

BISHOP Manning of New York, in addressing a convention of the American Guild of Organists in the Cathedral of St. John and Divine, had something to say about congregational singing that should interest many people. Such an act of worship, he said, is much neglected, as his hearers undoubtedly agreed, and may well be revived.

In all churches, especially in those whose congregations are the more prosperous, choir and organ do most of the work. In the evangelical congregations there is more personal participation in service music—some congregations make a great point of it, but by no means all. People stand, and if they were left to themselves there would be no deafening response, vocally. A singing congregation is a rarity for some reason, unless there is unusual fervor in worship. In some churches it seems as though a hearty individual singer would attract notice to himself. This is especially true in those in which much is made of their professional choirs. Not that some amateur vocalists can be praised especially as artists, but a high quality is not expected in the average congregation. Singing as worship is good for every participant, and "singing churches" are inspiring to attend. A good hymn can be made into an occasion.

The hum-hummer is numerous, but everybody does not even hum. Why not? The males are far too inclined to let the women and children go first. That is laudable in shipwrecks, but not called for in church.

BRIDES AND TIMES

SEVERAL explanations have been given for the marriage slump of the last three years. Uplifters and viewers-with-alarm find in it proof of civilization's breakdown and of moral decay. Hitler, of course, says the situation was fostered by the inequities of the Versailles treaty.

There is one rational and logical explanation. It is that the decline in marriages is purely a depression phenomenon. Hasty and poorly financed marriages still take place but they are less frequent than when jobs hunt the man.

This situation proves again that youth rushes in where old age fears to tread. The decline in nuptials is due to the patience and prudence of maturity rather than to youthful sobriety. Youth is still an impetuous lover, according to the marriage records.

Marriages among persons under 20 are increasing in spite of the depression and general unemployment. And it is probably a good thing because setting up housekeeping now costs less than a honeymoon did six years ago.

Strange how this institution of marriage is always shaking on its foundations but never falls. It is like the end of the world—scheduled for tomorrow but tomorrow never comes.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

HOW MANY TRICKS CAN NORTH WIN?

HERE IS A very interesting hand, unusually well played by North. The opening lead was the K of clubs, followed by the 4 of diamonds, which dummy's K won. The question was whether 4-odd could be made.

♠ K 10 7
♥ A Q J 9 6
♦ J 9 8 7
♣ 10

♠ A Q J
♥ 8 5
♦ Q 10 6
♣ A Q J

♠ 9 6 3 2
♥ K 7 4
♦ A K 5 3 2
♣ 7

Bidding went: South, 1-Diamond; West, 1-No Trump; North, 2-Hearts; East, 3-Clubs; South, 3-Hearts; West, 4-Clubs; North, 4-Hearts, which West doubled.

Having lost a club trick and won a diamond trick the declarer took three rounds of trumps, winning the last one in dummy. He saw that leading the K of diamonds would be fatal, as his J-9 would block him from further entry to the exposed hand.

At the sixth trick a low diamond was led from dummy. West's Q won. He ruffed North with a club lead. North took his J of diamonds, then he overtook his last diamond with the Ace, ran off dummy's last diamond and discarded a spade from his own hand. A spade lead from dummy caused North to lose his third and last trick, as he had left only the Ace of trumps and the good K of spades.

Had West refused to win the sixth trick with his Q, declarer's J would have captured opponent's 10, and a return lead of a low diamond, dummy playing low would have put West in the lead, giving North his 4-odd, just as if West had won the second diamond trick with his Q. Had North so chosen he could have taken the third round of diamonds with dummy's Ace, thus losing no diamond tricks. Then by leading a low spade from dummy North could have made his 4-odd, by losing two spade tricks, instead of one diamond and one spade. Perfect play insured 4-odd, after East led the singleton diamond at the second trick.

A lead of a trump, instead of a diamond, as East's second lead would have enabled North to fulfill his contract, by the same means he employed. A second lead of clubs at the second lead would have given 4-odd to North, just as the diamond lead did.

Had East led a spade, instead of a diamond, at the second trick, North must have lost to the Ace, then won with his K of that suit, but he still must have lost a diamond trick to West, then opponents would have won a fourth trick with West's good spade, before the declarer could have reduced his spade length by discarding one of them on an established diamond in dummy.

All the color and romance of a Western frontier town are shown in "Stone of Silver Creek," Buck Jones' latest Universal starring vehicle playing at the Grand Theatre for the last time tonight.

The efforts of Buck, upright and honest, though he is the proprietor of the town's leading dance hall, to convince the new "parson" that he is not a representative of the forces of evil are amusingly presented, and there comes a time when the open-minded minister openly allies himself with the man whose contributions he has at first refused to accept.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Ann Harding will be seen in a tense, dramatic role for the first time since she abandoned the stage for the talking screen when Edmund Goulding's production of "The Flame Within," co-starring Herbert Marshall, opens a three-heard a startling bit of gossip concerning Lia's closest friend, Donna Sandre. It revolved around scandal, long dead, and rumors flew about the school that Donna, who hailed from Puerto Rico had borne the taint of the tar-brush. The girl when questioned had remained haughtily silent. After that, naturally, she had been asked to leave.

What compelled Val's attention to this tale had been Lia's instant surrender of her adored friend. Scarcely, she had dropped Donna from her life without a single feeling except horror. That instinctive demand for racial purity was, he supposed, bred in southern bones and couldn't be helped. In a degree, he had it from his Virginia parents. Still, the thought of Lia's utter lack of sympathy, her disregard of loyalty to a friend, managed to shock him.

Now when the fire had begun to burn low, Val interrupted her idle reminiscences with a word of apology, swung to his feet and went out of doors to fetch wood. Returning, he piled a great careful of logs on the embers and watched the little joyous flames creep up through the apertures between the crossed pieces before he turned and went back for another load.

At the porch steps he paused to light a cigarette and as he stood there, his lungs with the soothing smoke, he leaned against a log pillar and stared up at the million worlds that spangled the night. Andromeda—Polaris—Betelgeuse—old friends, all. The cup of the sky was deepest darkest blue with that look of being seen through such clear and rarefied air that the stars scintillated with a glorious brilliance into tiny points of myriad colors.

Starlight! Disquieting dreams of Jan always came to him on nights like this! It had been starlight during those watches on the Yangtze when he had paced the deck of the old Panay and let his thoughts dwell with Jan. How sweet she had been that last day when he had sailed upriver, the day when he had called to find little Mimi ill and Jan in a love, tender mood. She had worn a clinging rose tea-gown and he recalled how she had pushed back the waves of her golden hair with such a tired, weary little gesture that he had slipped his arm about her slender body and she had relaxed against his shoulder for a space. Looking back on it now his pulse quickened as he realized that brief moment as the happiest in his whole life. What a blind fool he had been not to recognize in that instant all that Jan meant to him!

Since that first morning here when he had found her powder box in his tweed coat he had carried it in the pocket of his outing shirt; and now he brought out the small silver case and pressed it tightly against his cheek until his firm flesh was bruised by the contact. How he desired to see her! If he could just talk to her, hear her laugh, watch the lights come and go in her clear eyes—

He was swung abruptly back to the present by the little tap of Lia's heels as she crossed the cabin floor. A moment later the photograph began to play softly and suddenly he heard the girl's smooth, throaty voice singing—

"Blue is the night above me,
Blue as your eyes are blue,
Bright is the night if you love me."

Love me as I love you—

The glow disappeared from the cabin windows and he knew that the cabin door had opened and now blown out the lamp. The little tap of heels returned to the freight. The slow, soft voice sang on—

"Oh come with your sweetest kisses,
Don't make me wait and say Blue is—"

Jan! Oh, my darling, how I want you! God, how hopeless everything was! He had no right even to be thinking of her! Suddenly a desperate confusion mixed with anger took hold of him. In a blind, reasonless rage he flung back his arm, and exerting every ounce of his strength, threw the little silver case as far as he could hurt it into the lake. After that he stood for a space staring down at his empty hands.

"Bright is the night if you love me."

Love me as I love you—

He must fetch wood. Shoulders drooping, he started down the steps. At the bottom, as he moved forward, his boot crunched on something brittle that splintered beneath his heel. He stopped short. The little pile of broken glass from the smashed whiskey bottles! As if he had trod on a cobra that had shot its venom full strength into his veins, this sudden reminder sent a renewed craving for drink coursing through him until he trembled.

In desperation he turned toward the wood-block. There for the next hour he stood in the starlight swinging the gleaming axe as he split a great mound of cordwood into kindling. Anything to tire him, to wear down this torturing appetite! When he was weary and dripping with sweat he stripped, and, going to the lake's edge, used his shirt to sluice the key water over his flinching body. Then he caught a garment about his middle and sought the warm cabin where after a rub-down he donned pajamas and his flannel robe.

Ge, but that water had been cold! It was comfortable and pleasant here in the freights. But even as he threw himself down on the couch again, he knew that despite his exertions he was in for another tortured, wakeful night. What had got into him? What ailed him? He couldn't go on always a prey to this thing that seemed lately to command him! If he could only read, get his mind on something else—

Lia broke in on his distracted thoughts.

"Howevah could you have gone in that cold water tonight?" she asked with a shiver.

"I didn't. Just got pretty warm chopping wood and rinsed off at the lake-side. It was like ice, all right."

"You should be quite used to ice," she answered with a little shunt-wise smile. "I am getting to be. And, by the way, even if you haven't paid me a pretty speech in ages you might compliment me on my swimming. You had a bad time catching me today, you know."

"Haven't I told you? Sorry. You swim beautifully, of course. Where did you learn?"

"When I was 14 we spent a few weeks at Puerto Pollensa on Mallorca; and then there were summers at Virginia Beach. I lived in the water. Nothing else to do."

She was rather sweet lying there curled up in the chair, her lustrous eyes fixed on the fire. Had she been a taunt at his coldness a moment ago? She looked charming in that silk blouse and trim tweed skirt. One small foot swung lazily as she talked. What beautiful ankles she had—

She went on murmuring dreamily and he half-listened. "Once, in Mallorca, I put up my hair, stole the cook's lace mantilla and flowered shawl and ran away into the town. An English artist saw me there and wanted to paint my portrait. He was blond and very handsome and I pretended I was grown up. He discovered our villa and loitered outside the garden wall for days. But when Aunt Julia Lee found out, she took me away—"

Lia's aunt seemed to have been forever up to her interfering. A more recent case in point had been the nephew of Aunt Julia Lee's dearest girlhood friend. When this young man had come to Charleston on a visit he had fallen deeply in love with Lia. "He was so truly attractive even if he was poor," she murmured, "but Aunt Julia Lee was furious and took me away to China. And that, darling, was when I met you—"

Diplomatic Plans Held Back by Real Prospect of War in Europe

WASHINGTON—Most important question discussed around the State Department these days is the prospect of war. It is not talked about openly. But in the hushed halls of diplomacy, behind the swinging doors which shelter code cablegrams from Europe, it is whispered as coming soon. This war apprehension has a marked effect on State Department activity. Many plans and policies which might be pushed, are suspended in mid-air. Best guess is that the Ethiopian situation may cause war with Italy in September, and that if it drags beyond three months, Yugoslavia first, then the rest of Europe will be in it too. One thing at least which the State Department's war fear did not stop was preparation to attend the Brussels Congress on Design and Applied Arts, the Lisbon Conference of Zoology and the Geneva Conference to facilitate the customs treatment of samples and advertising matter.

Social Security Chief

Ohio's forthright Charles West, former member of the House, now the President's congressional "liaison" man, is slated for the Chairmanship of a new Board. It will administer social security measures. Also reported in line for places on the Board are Second Assistant Labor Secretary Arthur J. Altmeyer, who took an active part in the framing of the legislation, and Chairman Murray W. Latimer of the Railroad Retirement Board.

Childless Senator Charley McNary and his wife have adopted a six-months-old baby girl, naming her Charlotte. Members of the Missouri congressional delegation are relating with much hilarity how when Tom Pendergast, Kansas City boss, recently sailed for Europe, the adjoining suites and his room were filled to overflowing with orchids.

Ewing Mitchell, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who claims that one of the reasons for his dismissal was his open warning on Pendergast, has been approached by several national magazines with offers to write his "story" for them.

Long smoldering warring between Pennsylvania Representatives and Senator Joe Guffey has reached a state where the warring Congressmen have taken their side of the argument directly to the President. They demand that they get a fair share of the State's patronage pie.

Iowa's bull-voiced Senator Dickinson, who takes himself seriously as a Republican presidential possibility, can dish it out but he can't take it. For more than two hours he violently belabored the Senate munitions investigators. But when Senators Nye and Clark came back with a dose of his own medicine, he scuttled from the Senate chamber until they had finished talking. Big Jim Farley and his buddy, Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, are trying to find a cushy job for Omar Ketchum, unsuccessful candidate for governor in Kansas last

Surgeon's Leg Amputated, He Gives Help to Others

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN LONDON there is a cheerful little man who has both his legs amputated. He is a surgeon. He records his own personal experience for the benefit of others, under the heading, "The Criteria of Intolerable Pain."

He suffered from intolerable pain in both feet and demanded that they be amputated because he could endure it no longer. He wrote: "The clinical picture before operation is that of a man gradually wearing out in strength and spirit through pain, day and night, punctuated with bursts of acute agony which are a source of misery and anxiety to relatives and friends; immediately after amputation the patient rejoices in the sense of the daily access of increasing strength and good spirits."

We must all have experienced that feeling some time, of wanting to have some part of us that is undergoing pain actually cut off. A surgeon of my acquaintance told me not long ago of a patient who had walked into his consultation room that day holding out two thumbs and requesting that they be cut off.

Pain, however, once it is gone, leaves no sting. "Incidentally, it may be of interest to say that after 18 months of year. They thought they had found just the thing as State Works-Relief Administrator, but Harry Hopkins would have none of him and Jim and Guy had to begin their search all over again.

Poems That Live

LONGING
Come to me in my dreams, and then
By day I shall be well again!
For then the night will more than pay
The hopeless longing of the day.

Come, as thou can't a thousand times,
A messenger from radiant climes,
And smile on thy new world, and be
As kind to others as to me!

Or, as thou never can'st in sooth,
Come now, and let me dream it truth;
And part my hair, and kiss my brow,
And say: My love! why sufferest thou?

Come to me in my dreams, and then
By day I shall be well again!
For then the night will more than pay
The hopeless longing of the day.

NOTHING MUCH
"What started the trouble between you and the plaintiff?"

Defendant: "Well, yer honor, it was like this. He threw his beer over me—I hits him across the face with my bag of tools—then he cuts my head open with a bottle—an' the next thing we knows we find ourselves quarreling!"

On July 6, 1935, the patient's leg was amputated. He has since been able to walk on artificial legs.

"If any member of the profession with borderline cases on his hands cares to talk the problem over, and to learn sundry little devices for making the legless man's life comfortable and happy, I shall be only too glad to see him."

"He will even take a sporting interest of a modest kind in learning to walk on artificial legs."

relief I find it quite impossible to recreate in memory the pains themselves, although the memory of the circumstances and of the associated phenomena is vivid enough."

This patient has, however, not descended into Avernus in vain. He has some hints to help out the rest of humanity who may be suffering as he did.

"Within eight weeks or so the patient discovers a number of duties which he can perform, and his general health will proceed uphill continuously if he takes, say, four miles vigorous exercise daily in an arm-propelled chair—an exercise very nearly as satisfying as is rowing."

"He will even take a sporting interest of a modest kind in learning to walk on artificial legs."

"If any member of the profession with borderline cases on his hands cares to talk the problem over, and to learn sundry little devices for making the legless man's life comfortable and happy, I shall be only too glad to see him."

DEAN IS IRED; FRISCH NAMES CINCI HURLER

Dizzy Refuses to Appear in
St. Paul; Derringer to Start
For All-Stars.

CHICAGO, July 6—Cooling off somewhat by midnight, Frankie Frisch, Cardinal manager, replaced his fiery star pitcher, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean on the National league all-star team, after summarily dropping him because of a flare-up in St. Paul yesterday.

On the way back to St. Louis after the episode in St. Paul where the team played an exhibition game, Frisch said he had decided to use Dean in Cleveland Monday.

The falling out had occurred when Dean and his brother, Paul, refused to take part in the exhibition game. Dean couldn't see why he should perform and was still mad when the team's train went through Chicago. He termed the club a "chain gang outfit that would send a fellow back to the minors if you don't hit .600 ball."

Could Have Appeared? Frisch, who has been selected manager of the all-star team, closed his comments about the newest Dean scrape, with the opinion:

"I still think he could have done more for the fans at St. Paul. If a man doesn't think enough of his profession to take a bow before fans who drove 40 or 50 miles to see him, I don't know what I can do about it."

He did, however, announce he had selected Paul Derringer of Cincinnati as the starting pitcher and put Mel Ott of the Giants in right field instead of Paul Waner. Two other changes, he said, would be Wally Berger of Boston in center field instead of Joe Moore of the Giants, and Jimmy Wilson of Philadelphia behind the plate in place of Gus Mancuso, Giant catcher.

Dean, meanwhile, was still going strong in this vein:

"Braddon, (president of the Cardinals) and Rickey, (vice-president) treat players like dogs. Look at Pepper Martin. He got rhumatism in his ankle. Still they send him to St. Paul just to grab some money."

Paid for Coaching "Frisch didn't ask me to do anything. I was willing to pitch to a couple of batters just to give the folks a look at me, but he wouldn't let me. As to coaching, we have three men who get paid for that. I get paid for pitching."

The Cardinals won their game with St. Paul 6-2.

Two Kings Larger— "Heard the latest about Norwich?"

"No—what now?"

"He bought a Louis XIV bed, but it was too small for him, so he sent it back and asked for a Louis XVI."

Each Rabbit Costs $70 To Raise at Ohio Farm

COLUMBUS, July 6—The Ohio Government Survey is a serious piece of business and the survey men loaned by Ohio business and civic groups appreciate that fact.

Some items, however, the survey is revealing are too amusing to restrict to corridor comments or committee chuckles.

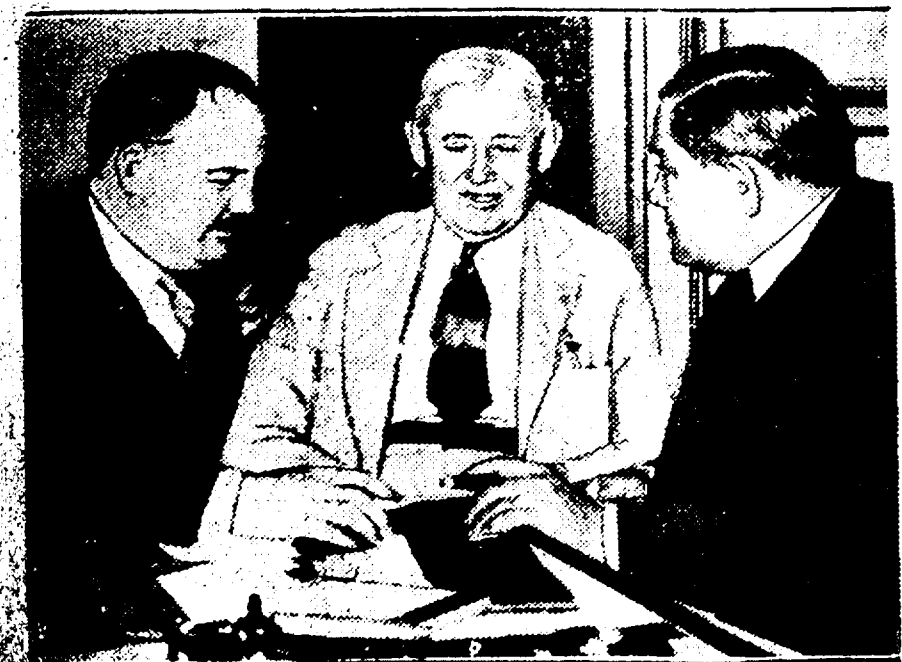

For example in the Conservation division under its bureau of game farms there is the Ohio State rabbit farm at Milan. The pheasantry farms have done rather well so the propagation of cotton-tails was undertaken.

The statistics show that the idea apparently had the approval of all concerned except the bunnies themselves. The wild rabbits who were to be given the benefit of more cultural refinement have seemed to resent interference with their natural habits and like many itinerants of the human race simply refuse to be "routinized."

The survey statistics show that an expenditure of $14,000 at the Milan state rabbitry had a net return of 203 rabbits, which calculated down into the language of the market-place averaged a cost of about $70 per cotton-tail.

Interesting little phases of state government and its expenditure of funds like the $70 rabbits are being unfolded and facts and recommendations will be made public as the survey report comes out.

Conferring on Sale of Braves

NARROWLY ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURIES

The dangers of reckless automobile operation will be shown Sunday when "The Hell Drivers," a group of automobile and motorcycle experts appear at the Ohio State fairgrounds under auspices of the Elks of Columbus.

Jumping over other automobiles, crashing machines at 40 miles an hour, running through fire, and every other danger will be attempted by the drivers.

LEADERS FACE TOUGH GAMES

Cities Service Crew Must Turn
Back Jones Specials, Circleville Oils.

Wet grounds caused postponement, Friday, of the recreation ball game between the Circleville Oils and the Purina Chows.

The league standing at present finds the Cities Service Oils in first place by only a half-game over the Eschelman Feeds. With Merle Davis and Rich Smalley at the Ohio National guard camp, the Cities Service crew is minus its shortstop and center fielder, and will be weakened when it appears against the Jones Specials Monday evening.

The Specials are the only athletes in the league able to defeat the Cities Service crew in the first round of the league schedule. They turned the trick in a well-played contest.

Other games next week include: Tuesday, Purina Chows vs. Eschelman Feeds.

Wednesday, Cities Service Oils vs. Circleville Oils.

Thursday, Pickaway Dairy vs. Jones Specials.

Friday, Pickaway Dairy vs. Eschelman Feeds, (postponed game).

RED BIRDS SWEEP MUD HENS ASIDE

COLUMBUS, July 6—The American Association teams were prepared today to swing into action after a lean day yesterday in which two games were played.

The Columbus Red Birds swept the three-game series from Toledo by taking the finale here by a 3 to 2 count. The Birds used three hurlers in taking the game which was featured by Jim Winsett's long homer with one Red Bird on base in the first inning.

The other Association game was a slugfest which Indianapolis defeated Louisville, 18 to 8, in nearly three hours of play. The Indians enjoyed two big innings, scoring five runs in the sixth and ending their attack with eight runs in the ninth inning.

Max Baer's wife hopes he won't fight any more. If his future engagements resemble the one with Braddock, her wish will be fulfilled.

MRS. MOODY WINS TITLE

Helen Wills Moody

LIMLEDON, July 6—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody regained her title as the greatest woman of them all on the tennis court today when she defeated her arch-rival, Miss Helen Jacobs, 6-3 3-6, and 7-5.

MacPHAIL NO PIKER

There is no one who can say Larry MacPhail of the Cincinnati Reds is a piker—He gave Manager Charlie Dresen the youngest and one of the most interesting ball teams in the big leagues and it is drawing crowds though in the second division—He bought Babe Herman, slugger deluxe but fielding clown—Friday he was able to get the name of Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler, former Pittsburgh and Chicago star, on the dotted line ***

JESSE OWENS TAKES BRIDE

Weds Cleveland Girl, Leaves To Take Part in Buffalo Track Meet.

CLEVELAND, July 6—Jesse Owens, Cleveland and Ohio State University negro track star, was on his way to Buffalo today—a benedict.

The world-famous broad jumper and virtual one-man track team, toed the mark in a bridal ceremony last night two hours after he arrived back in the city after a trip to the west coast.

Minnie Ruth Solomon, 19, Jesse's old sweetheart, is the girl that won the love of the speedy colored ace, and with the ceremony Miss Solomon dropped all efforts at breach of promise suits and the like, something she threatened to do while Jesse still was on the west coast.

Owens in a misguided moment gave his fraternity pin to the beautiful Miss Quincella Nickerson, daughter of the president of the Golden State Insurance Co. of Los Angeles. Eastern newspapers said the negro ace had announced his engagement to the girl. Miss Solomon wired and found out that Jesse still was "her man."

Following the trek to Buffalo, where Jesse will compete in a track meet, Owens intends to go on to New York. His wife hadn't decided early today whether to accompany her husband or not.

Thomas will hurl for the Police and probably Lefty Swinehart for the Ashville squad with Art Meier in reserve. Swinehart, Capital university star, has been scored on only once in 18 innings, winning two games for his team.

The game will start at 2:30.

HARRIDGE IS ILL

CHICAGO, July 6—Illness will prevent William Harridge, president of the American league from attending the annual major league all-star game at Cleveland on Monday. Harridge became ill on Wednesday and has been confined at the hospital. Although he has made steady improvement, doctors have not yet completed a diagnosis of the ailment and advised him against making the trip.

DEAN IS IRED; FRISCH NAMES CINCI HURLER

Dizzy Refuses to Appear In
St. Paul; Derringer to Start
For All-Stars.

CHICAGO, July 6—Cooling off somewhat by midnight, Frankie Frisch, Cardinal manager, replaced his fiery star pitcher, Jerome "Dizzy" Dean on the National league all-star team, after summarily dropping him because of a flare-up in St. Paul yesterday.

On the way back to St. Paul after the episode in St. Paul where the team played an exhibition game, Frisch said he had decided to use Dean in Cleveland Monday.

The falling out had occurred when Dean and his brother, Paul, refused to take part in the exhibition game. Dean couldn't see why he should perform and was still mad when the team's train went through Chicago. He termed the club a "chain gang outfit" that would send a fellow back to the minors if you don't hit .600 ball.

Could Have Appeared!
Frisch, who has been selected manager of the all-star team, closed his comments about the newest Dean scrape, with the opinion:

"I still think he could have done more for the fans at St. Paul. If a man doesn't think enough of his profession to take a bow before fans who drove 40 or 50 miles to see him, I don't know what I can do about it."

He did, however, announce he had selected Paul Derringer of Cincinnati as the starting pitcher and put Mel Ott of the Giants in right field instead of Paul Waner. Two other changes, he said, would be Wally Berger of Boston in center field instead of Joe Moore of the Giants, and Jimmy Wilson of Philadelphia behind the plate in place of Gus Mancuso, Giant catcher.

Dean, meanwhile, was still going strong, in this vein:

"Braddon, (president of the Cardinals) and Rickey, (vice-president) treat players like dogs. Look at Pepper Martin. He got rheumatism in his ankle. Still they send him to St. Paul just to grab some money."

Paid for Coaching
"Frisch didn't ask me to do anything. I was willing to pitch to a couple of batters just to give the folks a look at me, but he wouldn't let me. As to coaching, we have three men who get paid for that. I get paid for pitching."

The Cardinals won their game with St. Paul 6-2.

Two Kings, Larger—
"Heard the latest about Nor-wich?"
"No—what now?"
"He bought a Louis XIV bed, but it was too small for him, so he sent it back and asked for a Louis XVI."

NARROWLY ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURIES

The dangers of reckless automobile operation will be shown Sunday when "The Hell Drivers," a group of automobile and motorcycle experts appear at the Ohio State fairgrounds under auspices of the Elks of Columbus.

Jumping over other automobiles, crashing machines at 40 miles an hour, running through fire, and every other danger will be attempted by the drivers.

LEADERS FACE TOUGH GAMES

Cities Service Crew Must Turn
Back Jones Specials, Circleville Oils.

Wet grounds caused postponement, Friday, of the recreation ball game between the Circleville Oils and the Purina Chows.

The league standing at present finds the Cities Service Oils in first place by only a half-game over the Eshelman Feeds. With Merle Davis and Rich Smalley at the Ohio National guard camp, the Cities Service crew is minus its shortstop and center fielder, and will be weakened when it appears against the Jones Specials Monday evening.

The Specials are the only athletes in the league able to defeat the Cities Service crew in the first round of the league schedule. They turned the trick in a well-played contest.

Other games next week include: Tuesday, Purina Chows vs. Eshelman Feeds.

Wednesday, Cities Service Oils vs. Circleville Oils.

Thursday, Pickaway Dairy vs. Jones Specials.

Friday, Pickaway Dairy vs. Eshelman Feeds, (postponed game).

RED BIRDS SWEEP MUD HENS ASIDE

COLUMBUS, July 6—The American Association teams were prepared today to swing into action after a lean day yesterday in which two games were played.

The Columbus Red Birds swept the three-game series from Toledo by taking the finale here by a 3 to 2 count. The Birds used three hurlers in taking the game which was featured by Jim Winsett's long homer with one Red Bird on base in the first inning.

The other Association game was a slugfest which Indianapolis defeated Louisville, 18 to 8, in nearly three hours of play. The Indians enjoyed two big innings, scoring five runs in the sixth and ending their attack with eight runs in the ninth inning.

Max Baer's wife hopes he won't fight any more. If his future engagements resemble the one with Braddock, her wish will be fulfilled.

MRS. MOODY WINS TITLE

Helen Hull Jacobs
LIMLEDON, July 6—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody regained her title as the greatest woman of them all on the tennis court today when she defeated her arch-rival, Miss Helen Hull Jacobs, 6-3 3-6, and 7-5.

JESSE OWENS TAKES BRIDE

Weds Cleveland Girl, Leaves To Take Part in Buffalo Track Meet.

CLEVELAND, July 6—Jesse Owens, Cleveland and Ohio State University negro track star, was on his way to Buffalo today—a benedict.

The world-famous broad jumper and virtual one-man track team, toed the mark in a bridal ceremony last night two hours after he arrived back in the city after a trip to the west coast.

Minnie Ruth Solomon, 19, Jesse's old sweetheart, is the girl that won the love of the speedy colored ace, and with the ceremony Miss Solomon dropped all efforts at breach of promise suits and the like, something she threatened to do while Jesse still was on the west coast.

Owens in a misguided moment gave his fraternity pin to the beautiful Miss Quincella Nickerson, daughter of the president of the Golden State Insurance Co. of Los Angeles. Eastern newspapers said the negro ace had announced his engagement to the girl. Miss Solomon wired and found out that Jesse still was "her man."

Following the trek to Buffalo, where Jesse will compete in a track meet, Owens intends to go on to New York. His wife hadn't decided early today whether to accompany her husband or not.

Each Rabbit Costs $70 To Raise at Ohio Farm

COLUMBUS, July 6—The Ohio Government Survey is a serious piece of business and the survey men loaned by Ohio business and civic groups appreciate that fact.

Some items, however the survey is revealing are too amusing to restrict to corridor comments or committee chuckles.

For example in the Conservation division under its bureau of game farms there is the Ohio State rabbit farm at Milan. The pheasantry farms have done rather well so the propagation of cotton-tails was undertaken.

The statistics show that the idea apparently had the approval of all concerned except the bunnies themselves. The wild rabbits who were to be given the benefit of more cultural refinement have seemed to resent interference with their natural habits and like many itinerants of the human race simply refuse to be "routinized."

The survey statistics show that an expenditure of $14,000 at the Milan state rabbitry had a net return of 203 rabbits, which calculated down into the language of the market-place averaged a cost of about $70 per cotton-tail.

Interesting little phases of state government and its expenditure of funds like the $70 rabbits are being unfolded and facts and recommendations will be made public as the survey report comes out.
